

“Recreating the Text” of Ephesians

Brother Ferrell Jenkins in his fine workbook on Ephesians stresses the importance of “recreating the text” in studying the Scriptures. The idea is to take time to analyze a section of Scripture, putting the text in an outline hierarchy so that one can see quickly the overall emphasis of a passage and its supporting ideas

I have always thought this idea was very helpful in my study. In teaching Ephesians last year I took the time to develop an outline to recreate the text on each section of Ephesians as Brother Jenkins had divided it for his work and handed them out to the class to guide them. I wanted to share them with you in case you might be interested in using this approach.

I will make them available in a zip file that you can download and open them.
